Art Unit: 3754

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 13-24 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Monroe 3,356,263. As noted in the PCT search report, Monroe discloses a flexible tube 10, a shoulder 11, a closeable outlet 12, and a portion 27 of plasticized and squeeze formed material 27 that is a different color as disclosed on column 3, line 10-26. In regard to the method claims, the claims do not define any specific method for pressing or squeezing the material portion wherein the pressure head of height of the material in manifold 16 as shown in figure 7 of Monroe will generically press or squeeze material 27 into the cavity 25 against the mandrel 21 as claimed.

3. Applicant's arguments filed 9/30/2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant contends that the process of Monroe cannot form an integral tube as claimed. However, a common definition of integral is "formed as a unit with another part". The shoulder 27 of Monroe is clearly attached to the head spout 12 and the body sidewall 10 as a unit and is thereby integral. The Monroe tube once manufacture is one solid piece or integral as is typically defined in the art. The tube shoulder of the present invention is structurally different as contended by Applicant, then Applicant's arguments are far narrower than the claim language because the term integrally does not clearly define any structural difference over the Monroe reference. Claim 20 does not clearly define what is doing the pressing. Lines 6-9 define the material being deposited in the room between the head and the inner surface, then lines 11 and 12 define pressing the material portion in a first direction toward the annular room or shoulder and a second direction toward the outlet. What is pressing the material in the two directions is not stated or claimed. The method of Monroe will press the material as claimed by fluid pressure being applied from conduit 17 into the space between the head and the inner surface wherein the fluid pressure will force the material both toward the head 12 and the shoulder 22 as claimed. The claims do not define what specifically is applying the pressure. As claimed, the pressure could be coming from a material injection conduit such as conduit 17 in Monroe.

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
